Did you find a blissful moment at the North Rim of the Grand Canyon? I hope so, as the next destination is about an eight-and-a-half-hour drive southeast to Route 66.

"Standin' on a corner in Winslow, Arizona

Such a fine sight to see

There's a girl, my Lord

In a Winnebago Ford

Slowin' down to take a look at meee"

Along the infamous Route 66, there really is a corner in Winslow, Arizona, on which you can stand. They even named it "Standin' On a Corner Park" after the catchy line in the Eagles song "Take It Easy." I was surprised to find there was such a place. It is one of my favorite roadside attractions so far.

On the corner of Kinsley Avenue and Second Street/Route 66 is a statue of a young man leaning on his guitar, and on the store window behind him is a painting of a woman driving past in a red Ford pickup.

Across the street is a Route 66 memorabilia shop playing Eagles songs on a continuous loop. They have every Route 66 souvenir you can imagine. Painted in the intersection is a huge Route 66 road sign.

If you stand there long enough, you will see a steady stream of people stopping to take a photo on the corner. Many will ask you to take the photos for them. It's a great way to meet fellow travelers, and it's also good karma.

Coming next will be several more attractions along Route 66.
